* **Photoshop Elements** (www.adobe.com/products/photoshop\_elements.html): Photoshop Elements is a photo editing program for the home user. It includes a large set of image-editing tools. It can be used without Adobe's other applications, but Elements is the Photoshop application for the novice. It's free. * **FotoMagico** (): If you want to start with a tutorial program that comes complete with lots of preloaded stock images, FotoMagico is the program for you. It is available in a free version and a paid version, both of which include more than 20 image-editing tools, including the ability to work with RAW images. * **Gimp** (): The Gimp is one of the best open source programs for image manipulation. It is especially useful if you need to do a lot of basic image editing, in which case it can save money, time, and work. Its learning curve isn't steep, but it's still worth knowing about. The Gimp works with JPEG, GIF, and BMP files. If you do a lot of Photoshop editing, you may find it faster than Photoshop. It is a free application. * * * # Editing your photos with raw
The term `_raw_` refers to a camera's digital format of uncompressed images. Raw images aren't processed (or altered) by the camera, so they don't include any of the data that you'd normally see in your finished photograph. For this reason, raw files tend to be larger than JPEG files, which usually are a compressed format. You can download photos from your camera using the application provided with the camera or using a memory card reader. The `_raw_` format gives you much more flexibility in editing and converting the image. In fact, it allows you to create images that have the same visual quality as your camera takes, but your camera doesn't have the capacity to do this. The quality loss that you can suffer as a result of working with this format is best viewed as a trade-off, as you can obtain much better editing results with the raw format. I don't recommend using the raw format to edit a digital photo. When you edit a raw image, the original camera data is lost and unusable. The camera captures all of the image data on the

Serbian police have arrested two women who were accused of performing satanic rituals and using witchcraft on a seven-year-old girl. Around 100 officers raided the house in the capital Belgrade on Tuesday after her parents reported their daughter's bizarre behaviour. The girl was found reading an opened copy of the book 'The Thirteen Gates of the Kingdom of Darkness', the investigators said. Earlier this year, the child had also prayed to the devil, asking him for something and said that she would burn herself and kill others after she said a prayer. The cops said the girl's parents were "friends" and that they had called for the police when the girl's behaviour first began to change. Download the new Independent Premium app Sharing the full story, not just the headlines The child was taken to a specialised psychiatric clinic and was later diagnosed as having been subject to sexual and physical abuse as well as undergoing a psychological breakdown. The parents' lawyer Anton Nedić said that the two women, whose identities have not yet been released, had been detained "for their own safety" and that they should be released as soon as possible. Earlier this month, a three-year-old girl died in Bulgaria after she was accused of witchcraft by her parents. The girl had spent more than three years in prison accused of sorcery. Police in the South African province of Limpopo have arrested two brothers for allegedly killing a three-year-old girl with witchcraft. According to reports, the police began their investigation after the child's parents, worried about the child's health, took her to a traditional healer. Both suspects had complained that they had been using sorcery against the girl, who died on Sunday. They had told the parents that she had been possessed by evil spirits. In another case, a four-year-old girl had to be killed after she was accused of practising witchcraft in several Southern African provinces. The suspect had been arrested by the regional police, but no formal charges had been pressed at that time. According to a report by the Daily Telegraph, the four-year-old girl had to be killed because she had been "violently kicked and smacked with a stick while being accused of practising witchcraft". The child's mother had brought her to the home of a "mag
